

Unite Home With Backyard

Project Profile

The design goal was to gain space for outdoor living and to preserve open lawn space for the children to play on. The challenge was how to best transition from the door to ground level.

The solution entailed a combination of landings and a series of steps with a custom wrought iron railing. Curving retaining walls create a transition between house and patio and provide for extra seating space. A seat wall with end piers completes the ground level patio. The result was a satisfying resolution to the contrast between first floor elevation and patio elevation.
